March News

Welcome to our newsletter!
We hope to make this a regular feature. If you found this in your spam, please add us to your contacts.

Take an ecological look at the spring season in our region, from the harsh heights of Mount Washington down to the forests and valleys
below, examining the flora, wildlife and birds that call the northern environment home.

Do you work from home? Did you know the library has a meeting room you can reserve for remote work? We would also love to hear from you about what services or technology you may need, related to remote work, that the library could offer. Please contact the library for more information.

Abby and Kelli Shedd work together to create a haiku, a form of short poetry with limited lines and syllables, using the contents of one of our Play + Learn boxes. Available for use in the library and made possible through a gift from the Harrison Youth Boosters, the boxes are designed to encourage learning and connection for the families of elementary-age students, with boxes for PreK-Grade 2 and Grades 3-6.

We have special items you can borrow and enjoy together as a family: Maine Audubon Nature Explorer Backpacks, a Telescope, and our new Explore Bags, filled with books and activities to do a deep dive on a topic. Please stop by to see what is available!

A recent Book Club
selection: Margreete's Harbor by Eleanor Morse

When Margreete Bright nearly burns down the family home, her daughter Liddie comes to the painful realization that she must uproot her family and move back home to take care of her mother. The upheaval of the 1960s serves as the background for this tender and poignant Maine story.
